(Read pages 211-213)

The field was full of people and the buzz of different conversations left Eva and Kate dazed. For a moment they closed their eyes and let the waves of sound wash over them.

Later that evening they tried to remember all the snippets of conversations they heard; they took turns to write them down on scraps of paper, which they stuck to a large sheet of card that Eva brought from her cottage to create a collage of comments that were unusual; funny or simply weird. The paper was a little distressed by the time they used it, but they didn't mind at all.

Do you think that you could help them to create the collage?
