Finding Refuge

During the Second World War, a farm in Millisle, Co Down provided a place of safety for Jewish children who had fled from the Nazis. Children and others faced the trauma of leaving family and home. Often rescued by what became known as the Kindertransport, some children came to a farm in Millisle, leased by the Belfast Jewish community. Use the website to discover more about this unique link between Northern Ireland and the Holocaust. This multimedia resource tells the moving story of the people connected to the farm. It enables pupils to engage with the story developing links across the curriculum.
