It was a huge shed full of old bikes, some not so old and others (). In the end they found Tiger. Charlie was sure that it was Tiger, in spite of its new () of paint.

Murt McGillicuddy was on () when they called to the Garda station. 'Don't you know,' he said, 'every bike has a number () on the frame. If we knew the number of a stolen bike we could maybe find out who () it.'

'I don't know anything about a number,' said Charlie. 'I never saw a number on Tiger and I () every bit of it.'

'No use,' Miko said. 'We'd have to be sure. Is there anything at all you can do, Charlie, to () out which of those old bikes it might be?'

Charlie thought for a while. 'If only I could () to it,' he said without thinking.
